Robert Wood Johnson Foundation
Investigator Awards in Health Policy Research

2008 Call for Applications

Application Deadline

March 26, 2008

Program Overview

(Please refer to specific sections for complete details.)

Purpose

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Investigator Awards in Health Policy Research program supports highly qualified individuals to undertake broad studies of America's most challenging policy issues in health and health care. Grants of up to $335,000 are awarded to investigators from a variety of disciplines for innovative research projects that have national policy relevance.

Eligibility Criteria (page 5)

- Applications are welcomed from investigators in the health, social and behavioral sciences, as well as other fields.
- The program seeks a diverse group of applicants including minorities, researchers early in their careers, and individuals in nonacademic settings.
- Applicants must be affiliated either with educational institutions or with 501(c)(3) nonprofit organizations located in the United States.
- Past awardees and teams of more than two researchers are ineligible to apply.

Selection Criteria (page 5)

Complete selection criteria can be found on page 5.

Total Awards

- Approximately 10 awards will be made in this grant cycle.
- The maximum award is $335,000 including personnel, other direct costs and indirect costs calculated at a rate of up to 12 percent.

Key Dates and Deadlines

- March 26, 2008 (5 p.m. ET)—Deadline for receipt of letters of intent.
- June 13, 2008—Applicants will be notified by mail whether they have been selected to submit a full proposal.
- July 29, 2008—Deadline for receipt of full proposals.
- December 15, 2008—Notification letters mailed to proposal applicants.
- March 1 to September 1, 2009—Acceptable start dates for projects.

How to Apply (page 8)

This program accepts paper applications only.

Complete instructions on how to apply can be found on page 8. Tips on how to develop a competitive application and samples of past, successful letters of intent are available at www.investigatorawards.org/applications.

Background

There is no shortage of complex health challenges facing the United States. Increased longevity is accompanied by a rise in chronic conditions. The number of Americans who are uninsured continues to grow, millions have insufficient access to care and suffer from untreated illness and disabilities, and health and treatment disparities abound. Obesity rates among children and adults are too high; we have shortages of needed health care personnel, and delivery and financing systems are difficult to navigate. These and other dilemmas are compounded by escalating demand for services and pressures to control spending.

Research that takes a multidisciplinary perspective can enhance our understanding of such challenges, find innovative ways to address them and inform the process of policy-making. Through the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Investigator Awards in Health Policy Research program, the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF) has invested more than $33 million in research over the last 15 years on a wide range of health and health care problems in America. Descriptions of previously funded projects and their products can be found at www.investigatorawards.org.

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Investigator Awards in Health Policy Research is part of the Human Capital Portfolio, reflecting our long-standing investments that seek to build and maintain a strong and diverse leadership and workforce in health and health care, as well as to help develop specific fields.

The Program

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Investigator Awards in Health Policy Research program supports researchers whose cross-cutting and innovative ideas promise to contribute meaningfully to improving health and health policy in America. Each year, the program awards 24- to 36-month grants of up to $335,000 to highly qualified individuals to fund approximately 10 research projects that have national policy relevance.

We seek a diverse mix of investigators to undertake studies that:

- explore underlying values, historical evolution and interplay among the social, economic and political forces that shape health, health care and health policy in the United States;
- apply new perspectives from a variety of disciplines to analyze the organization, delivery and financing of health care services, workforce issues and public health challenges;
- develop innovative ideas that hold promise for contributing to better policy-making; and
- synthesize existing work in ways that expose its policy significance and advance the understanding of key issues.

Please note: The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Investigator Awards in Health Policy Research program funds projects with a broader scope than traditional National Institutes of Health or National Science Foundation grants. Data-driven health services research that focuses on a narrowly defined research question is inappropriate for this program, as are pilot projects that are designed to evaluate clinical care in a specific geographic area or to demonstrate service delivery programs or financing strategies.

Eligibility Criteria

Applications are welcomed from investigators in fields such as anthropology, business, demography, economics, engineering, ethics, genetics, health and social policy, health services research, history, journalism, law, medicine, nursing, political science, psychology, public health, science policy, social work, sociology and others. We seek a diverse group of applicants including minorities, researchers early in their careers, and individuals in nonacademic settings such as research firms and policy organizations. Applicants must be affiliated either with educational institutions or with 501(c)(3) nonprofit organizations located in the United States. Past awardees and teams of more than two investigators may not apply.

Selection Criteria

Proposal evaluation is based upon:

- relevance of the research to national policy and its potential to inform and improve policy-making;
- contribution and potential significance of the project to the theoretical underpinnings and knowledge base of health, health care or health policy;
- extent to which the research represents an innovative perspective on health, health care or health policy;
- soundness of the project's conceptual framework (the ideas, concepts, theories and bodies of knowledge informing the proposed approach) and methodology;
- feasibility of the research;
- likelihood that the findings will be useful to policy-makers and other leaders;
- capability of the investigator to undertake and complete the project on schedule; and
- investigator's research record, and for pairs of investigators, prior experience working together.

Use of Grant Funds

The maximum award is $335,000 including personnel, other direct costs, and indirect costs to be calculated at a rate of up to 12 percent.

Investigators must be prepared to commit substantial time to the project. Grant funds are to be used primarily for project salary support for the principal investigator(s). In circumstances where salary support may be available from other sources, a larger portion of the budget may be allocated to research-related expenses. Following RWJF practice, all grantees are expected to participate in national meetings designed to share their work with other investigators whom the program supports. Annual reports, which are necessary for grants management and monitoring, must be submitted.

Program Direction

Direction and technical assistance are provided by the Institute for Health, Health Care Policy and Aging Research at Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, which serves as the national program office (NPO):

Institute for Health, Health Care Policy,
and Aging Research
Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey

Responsible staff members at the NPO are:

- David Mechanic, Ph.D., program director
- Lynn Rogut, deputy director
- Cynthia Church, program administrator

Responsible staff members at the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation are:

- David Colby, Ph.D., vice president, Research and Evaluation
- Lori Melichar, Ph.D., senior program officer, Research and Evaluation
- Frederick Mann, deputy director, Communications
- Christine Phares, grants administrator

A national advisory committee (NAC) of experts drawn from such fields as medicine, public health, economics, nursing, political science, sociology, law, history, journalism and the behavioral sciences assists in proposal review and makes funding recommendations to RWJF.

How to Apply

Applications must be received by the NPO no later than the deadline of 5 p.m. ET on March 26, 2008.

Applicants may submit only one application annually and the number of investigators per project is limited to no more than two.

To apply, please submit seven collated sets of the following:

- A brief transmittal letter printed on organizational letterhead.
- A four-page, double-spaced letter of intent printed on plain paper using a 10-, 11- or 12-point font.
- A full curriculum vitae for each principal or co-investigator (up to two per project).
- A completed Application Summary Sheet for each investigator—downloaded from the program Web site at www.investigatorawards.org/applications.

Before you start writing your letter of intent, please read the tips on how to develop a competitive application and the samples of past, successful letters of intent that are available on the program Web site at www.investigatorawards.org/applications.

The double-spaced letter of intent must include:

- the title of the proposed research project;
- a brief description of the problems being addressed and their policy significance;
- the specific research questions and issues to be explored;
- a summary of the approach and activities to be undertaken;
- the anticipated contribution of the proposed study to improving health policy and the potential audience(s) for the work; and
- the project length and estimated budget ($335,000 maximum including indirect costs of up to 12 percent).

An itemized budget is not required at this stage; cited references are not required but may be included on a separate page.

After all letters of intent are reviewed, a limited number of applicants will be invited in June 2008 to submit full proposals.

The number of grants will depend on the nature, quality and estimated budgets of applications received, with approximately 10 awarded annually.

RWJF does not provide individual critiques of letters of intent or proposals submitted.

Send your application package by overnight delivery or regular mail (do not use fax or e-mail) to:

Ms. Lynn Rogut, deputy director
RWJF Investigator Awards in Health Policy Research
55 Commercial Ave., Third Floor
New Brunswick, NJ 08901-1340

In fairness to all applicants who meet the deadline, letters of intent that arrive later than 5 p.m. ET on March 26, 2008 will not be considered. Please ensure that your application arrives before the deadline. Applications sent by fax or e-mail will not be accepted.

If you have questions, please contact the NPO (e-mail preferred) at depdir@ifh.rutgers.edu or call (732) 932-3817.
